

generateBuildId

Next.js uses a constant id generated at build time to identify which version of your application is being served. This can cause problems in multi-server deployments when `next build` is run on every server. In order to keep a consistent build id between builds you can provide your own build id.

Open `next.config.js` and add the `generateBuildId` function:

JS next.config.js

```
1 module.exports = {
2   generateBuildId: async () => {
3     // You can, for example, get the latest git commit hash here
4     return 'my-build-id';
5   },
6 };;
```

